@Machina

@Machina

The audiovisual installation in the machine room of the LWL Industriemuseum Ziegelei Lage. The relationship between man and machine is spatially visualized with projection mapping, techno and light installations over 3 floors around the edge mill. The automation of work, the digitization of our lives. Computers do almost everything for us. How do machines communicate with each other?

The pan mill, the main machine in the room, served as a grinder for the clay to be processed for the bricks and is recontextualized by the projected animations and used as the main projection surface.

The metaphor of the Dark Factory - the deserted factory - an image of the future that already seems to be reality today, continues to advance. Machines will increasingly displace mankind from professions for which society no longer finds any use. The future of work will be determined by the social impact of digitization.

The old brickworks in Lage - today an industrial museum - is special in its experience as a media space, since this factory already represents a dark factory in a broader sense. Suppressed by technical progress and automation, it is no longer in operation and is a reflection of the past. By projecting a future perspective of work onto the environment of a disused industry, the Alte Ziegelei awakens in the digital age and becomes a smart factory.

Ooia

The aim of the Motion Reel for Ooia is to represent the Ooia brand as it deserves by showcasing its products, style and most importantly its values in the form of a motion reel. The core values can be presented visually and summarized. Some of the core values are more strongly represented in the implementation than others. Since for Ooia e.g. trust and diversity are natural and omnipresent, these points are not consciously addressed.

What better way to represent the period than with (blood) cells, which make gentle and stronger flow movements because the panties are perfect for your flow.

The cells work great as frames, as backgrounds and as fades. The core values of Ooia can be found on the website with icons, which I have adopted to visually represent the core values, to briefly show the areas, interests, products and important information and to create a recognition value.

The colours were taken from the Instagram account, the most represented and strong colours are harmoniously combined in the design. The colours stand for the strong personalities of the women. For her self-confidence and femininity.

Loud, "Oh yes", the period can also be fun, you shouldn't hide, show who you are, do what you like to do and shine in our sexy panties. The period is coming, a drop of blood appears, the logo Ooia appears at the completion of the circle, accompanied by the "oohe" of Jain's song "Makeba". Ooohe, Makeba, Makeba ma qué bella Can I get an "oohe?" Makeba Makes my body dance for you Ooohe, makeba ma how beautiful Can I get an "oohe" Makes my body dance for you A happy loud strong female song snippet Why shouldn't women dance on their period feel good be sexy and have fun?!

Motion branding was created in connection with the "Motion Branding" course at Bielefeld University of Applied Sciences.

A fateful excuse, an absurd excuse, between student and lecturer. The idea started with wanting to write a script that is so absurd that it's a lot of fun to shoot

Paris

Paris

Paris

I started creating a collage with images from my own photos of past trips to Paris. Since I didn't like any of the pictures for the "Terrace", I decided to look around at Unsplash and downloaded three pictures there and cut them out. In order to make the collages look alive, camera movements, panning, zoom-ins, rotations... followed to give the viewer the feeling to stand in the middle of Paris and see all the beautiful places and immerse yourself in this world.

I first set up the lip sync in Illustrator. I used a template to see how the mouth should be open and in which position. The handle with I took over the full, feminine lips from previous projects, but this had to be done from scratch and redesigned with the pen When I wanted to bring the lip sync into After Effects and enter the expression, the lips only appear at the frame of a to let the time-lapse move at a different frequency, the first problem that caused me to despair for several hours appeared when I was dealing with several tutorials sat down and did it for the 8th time, it worked, and I could start to animate the lips to match the text. I chose the chorus for the animation because I found this passage very appropriate, and it occurs three times in the song.

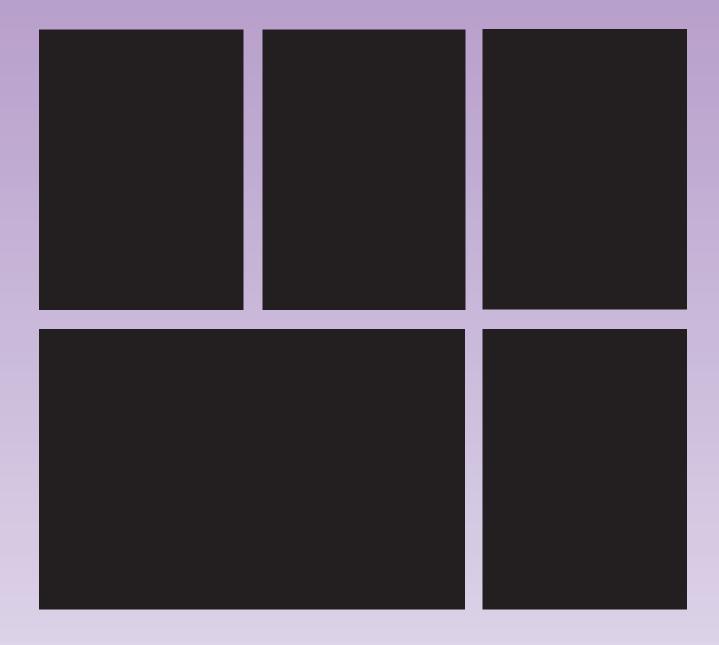

The further course of my work consisted of making the video coherent, and for this I asked two friends (Jacob and Femke) if they could walk through the forest for me and stretch out their arm motivating to say a hopeful and create an engaging atmosphere. More collages, lip-sync repeats, and split-screen animations followed to make the video exciting and rhythmic.

Space Audio Visuall

Space

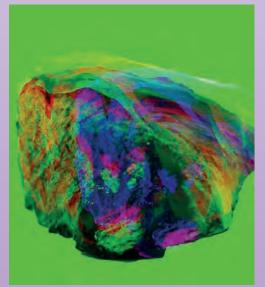

Space is an Audiovisual Music Video, created in TouchDesigner. The different Sounds are visualized with different animations. The Sound is created by Noni Schmidt with my instructions.

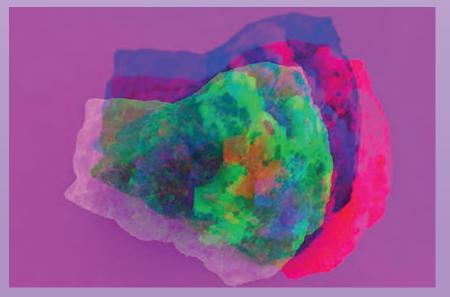

Steinwunder

Steinwunder Collection

The project "MY PRECIOUS", stone wonders started with choosing a collection, as I personally don't collect much, I chose the stone collection in our basement. My idea was to bring the lifeless stones into digital life, I wanted to bring the stones from their natural environment into a modern and exciting format. I did this with the Colour Channel, inspired by artist Zoe Rose Schwartz. I photographed 30-50 stones and in Photoshop I cut them out and separated them in their colour layers. In order to make the stones appear alive, GIF animations followed, for which I worked out in Photoshop. In the beginning, simple, large movements were more like jumps, which over time and overwork became more flowing movements.

@wo_mens Workshop

@wo mens

To work on this workshop, we mainly chose the text of Penny Sparke about Postmodernism. This text was really interesting and had a lot of different points. The Britain author talked about feminine stereotypes, patriarch, gender market, gender roles and domestic sphere.

All those points help us to start our project. We decide with humour to criticize those gender codes that designer and marketing are using to sell a product to a specific gender. We mixed products to create a new one for the opposite gender.

For example, the vacuum cleaner, which is the basic product for the women to take care of the house, is mixed with a jackhammer to make it more masculine and more virile. This machine was invented for women to clean the house and to be a good wife and housekeeper.

Illustration Poetry

Jedes Mal, wenn die Sonne untergeht, die Welt in ein letztes Mal in ihr wunderschönes Licht fällt und sich ein weiteres mal vom Mond, welcher schon am Himmel steht verabschiedet, denke ich an die Kraft welche zwischen der Sonne und dem Mond steht, eine Kraft welche stärker und heller sein muss.

Eine Kraft, welche aus der Mitte deines Körpers strahlt und dir die Kraft gibt alles zu erreichen, was du dir erträumst.

Diese Kraft muss die Seele sein.

Die Seele.

Die Passion.

Welche in jedem von uns steckt.
